Initiative launched to save a million litres of water in Strovolos

A NEW initiative aiming to save one million litres of water from restaurants in the Strovolos area of Nicosia was announced on Thursday by Agriculture Minister Costas Kadis.

During a news conference, Kadis said 'Water is in Our Hands' was an initiative focusing on the storage and utilisation of surface water, effective water management and leak detection in water networks and irrigation systems.

It will also follow the EU Water Framework Directive "based on the principles of precaution and preventive action."

'Water in Our Hands' is co-organised by the Strovolos municipality, the AKTI Research Centre and the Greek detergent company Finish.

Due to climate change, it is imperative to save water, the minister.

"We must use water and not abuse it, even in times when we are not deprived of it," he added.

In the past, he said, Cyprus made proposals to the European Union Recovery and Sustainability Fund and through the Green Economy, projects aiming at the rational management of water resources, the minister said.
